Introduction

Ikenoue Student Dormitories were established with the aim of offering lodgings that are suited to students' study, and allow them to experience life as responsible citizens.

The dormitories are made up of western-style individual rooms that respect the students' right to live as an individual. At the same time, as there are ten to twenty people living on each floor, the dormitories also offer a communal living environment. While there are various systems and restrictions set for the communal living areas, as Japanese students and international students with differing cultures and customs live together in the dormitories, it is crucial that residents possess a high level of mutual understanding and tolerance. By taking just a little care, such as showing compassion toward others and making efforts to think of other residents before acting, life in the dormitories will become meaningful and enjoyable.

In the communal living areas there will sometimes be cases where there is conflict between residents over noise from neighbors or the way communal areas are used. If you have a concern or issue, we encourage you to discuss it with the other party or those around you, rather than keeping it to yourself. If the issue cannot be resolved through discussions, it can be raised as a topic at the Floor Meeting, or you can discuss it with the Student Dormitories Caretaker. In addition to discussing issues with you, we are more than happy to provide any support whenever required, so please feel free to visit us in the Administration Office or the Students Services Group, Department of Educational Affairs, Education Office (3rd floor, Student Plaza).

In the future you will be graduating to start your life outside of university, and the things you learn during this experience of communal living in the student dormitories will be extremely valuable. Interacting effectively with others, working together, thinking of others before acting, and taking into consideration 'the big picture' are not things that come easy, but during your time living in the dormitories we hope that you gradually learn these.

You have been granted the right to live in the dormitories as the result of an extensive selection process involving many candidates, so during your time in the dormitories please do not forget that there were many people who were unsuccessful in their application to live here.

This Ikenoue Student Dormitories Living Guide contains all the necessary information for living in the dormitories. Please read through it carefully, and keep it handy so that you can refer to it as needed while living here.
