The Law School establishes the Program for Law Practice Professionals as an Expert Diploma Program of study in order to develop high-level professionals seeking to take a leading role in the broader field of professional law. This program develops personnel who have a deep understanding of the legal profession, who know how to put their high-level, specialized legal knowledge to good use when resolving legal matters, and who appropriately and flexibly know how to apply it depending on the situation. Moreover, it teaches them how to remain steadfastly cognizant of their status as professionals and specialists each and every time they engage in their professional duties, all while sincerely reflecting on their own conduct in order to further extend their knowledge - every day being able to continue learning new things. Furthermore, by allowing individuals from a wide range of scholastic and professional backgrounds to enter, it is the objective of the law school to turn out a large number of legal professionals who have a distinct set of perspectives. By collectively acquiring varied legal outlooks and value systems, it is hoped that such law professionals will be able to manage themselves in distinct areas that require specialized knowledge, and thus pioneer new standards in law. In other words, we will develop professionals who can contribute to their societies with a novel set of abilities.
