

Supporting Hiroshima University Students' Studies!

Guide to the Center for Academic Practice and Resource

Q I'm a new student, and I am uncertain what goals to set or how to proceed from here.

A The student staff at the Center for Academic Practice and Resource are Hiroshima University graduate students. Talking with the student staff about their experiences can give you some insights. Come in for a consultation. They can also direct you to other consultation services appropriate for your issue.

Q I need help in completing a class assignment.

A The Center for Academic Practice and Resource accepts consultations for mathematics, physics, chemistry, and English. The student staff can give easy-to-understand advice for each subject from a student's perspective.

Q I don't know how to write a report or thesis paper.

A The student staff can give advice on writing reports and thesis papers by explaining their study methods and pointing you to helpful materials. They can also direct you to support centers for report and thesis paper writing at the university.

Q I need advice on registering for classes or about credits for graduation.

A The student staff will go through the student handbook or the "Momiji" system together with you. They will also direct you to where you can get more specific advice.

Q I need specific advice on how to study.

A The student staff can explain their study methods and point you to helpful books and other materials in their respective subjects.

At the Center for Academic Practice and Resource, the student staff will listen attentively to whatever you need to discuss and use their knowledge and experience to offer advice that will guide you to the right solution. If your issue is too difficult to be solved with the student staff alone, they can also point you to other appropriate consultation services offered by the university.

What is the Center for Academic Practice and Resource?

At the Center for Academic Practice and Resource, students can use the Learning Support Counter to receive counseling on concerns about day-to-day studies and study methods for various liberal arts subjects (mathematics, physics, chemistry, and English) from the student staff (principally graduate students). The Center also holds events such as Freshmen Get-together and HU Students' Meeting, planned by the student staff.

Come on by! Freshmen Get-together and HU Students' Meeting

Freshmen Get-together

The student staff at the Center for Academic Practice and Resource plan this event for new students who started at Hiroshima University in the spring to foster relationships across undergraduate schools and graduate schools and give the students an opportunity to talk about worries they might have about studying and university life. Students are divided into small groups where they do self-introduction activities and engage in directed discussion to foster relationships.

HU Students' Meeting

The student staff at the Center for Academic Practice and Resource plan this event for first- and second-year students to give them an opportunity to discuss concerns about studies, life, or anything else that might be on their mind. When there are many international students participating, some groups are more lively in English. At the end of the meeting, students have had the chance to expand their circle of acquaintances by exchanging contact information with fellow participants.

Center for Academic Practice and Resource Newsletter

To spread the word about activities at the Center for Academic Practice and Resource, the Center for Academic Practice and Resource Newsletter is distributed to showcase events, columns by student staff, and student staff activities.

Learning Support Counter

"I don't know how to write a report." "What's the best way to ask a question during class?" If you have worries like these, or if you want help on study methods and problems in liberal arts subjects, the student staff (graduate students) at the Center are here to help. Work with the student staff to find tips and solutions.
