[Notes]

- The academic year is divided into two semesters: the first (spring) semester from April 1 to September 30, and the second (fall) semester from October 1 to March 31 of the following year. Students register for subjects of their own choice every semester, in principle. In addition, each semester is further divided into two terms, making a total of four terms in a year (from the first term to the fourth term). There are two types of subjects, depending on the class method: term subjects which are held two classes a week over one term, and semester subjects which are held a week over one semester (i.e., two terms).
- The actual class schedule may differ depending on the academic year. For the class schedule, please check the academic year calendar of each academic year on the MOMIJI page.
