

HIROSHIMA UNIVERSITY

Graduate School of Humanities and Social Sciences
The International Peace & Coexistence Programme

with the African Studies Center, Tokyo University of Foreign Studies

Transnational Migration and Entrepreneurship

Livelihoods, Entrepreneurship and Xenophobia in South Africa

Migration processes in the 21st century are a worldwide phenomenon deeply intertwined with complex social, economic, and political patterns and processes.

Religious identity plays a significant role in the efforts of Malawian and Senegalese Muslim migrants to find solutions to their challenges of adaptation, integration, and assimilation in a new post 1994 environment in South Africa. This lecture explores whether their identities, particularly their religious, ethnic, and national identities, rather than normative values, provide them with the resources needed to succeed as entrepreneurs and workers in a different country.

De Certeau's conceptual distinction between strategy and tactics serves as a framework for evaluating how Malawian and Senegalese migrants utilize religion and associated values to succeed or seek other alternatives.

A LECTURE BY

Shahid Vawda

Professor Shahid Vawda currently is researcher at the History Workshop at the University of Witwatersrand, a senior research associate at the Centre for African Studies at the University of Cape Town, and a visiting professor in African Studies, Tokyo University of Foreign Studies. He was the first Archie Mafeje Chair in Critical Humanities at the University of Cape Town, 2017–2021. He has been active on panels of UNESCO related to culture, and heritage, the United Nations Office of the Special Advisor on Africa, the boards of the International Council of Museums Committee for History and Archaeology (ICMAH), African Centre for Migration and Society and the Wits Institute for Social and Economic Research. He also served on the International Council of Museums' Strategic Allocation Review Committee.

The 28th International Peace & Coexistence
Seminar

Wednesday, 22 November 2023 18:10–19:40 IDEC Large Conference Room