

Challenges for Disarmament in 21 century

21世紀軍縮の課題

Ms. Izumi Nakamitsu

Mitsuo Ochi, President of Hiroshima University

Hiroshima University intends the following: to disseminate information related to our global challenges, with the aim of creating a new concept of "Science for Sustainable Development"; to receive international researchers and students aspiring to knowledge creation; to play a role in creating a global, diversified, free, and peaceful society, by cultivating peace-pursuing, cultured individuals with an international mindset and a challenging spirit in all quarters of society including international communities.

Ms. Izumi Nakamitsu :

Under-Secretary-General High Representative for Disarmament Affairs United Nations

Ms. Izumi Nakamitsu earned a Master's Degree in Foreign Service from Georgetown University in Washington, D.C. After developing her career at multiple international organizations, she took up the post of Professor of International Relations at Hitotsubashi University in 2005. Afterwards, she has advanced her career by serving as the Assistant Administrator of the Crisis Response Unit at UNDP, and as the Special Adviser Ad Interim on Follow-up to the Summit on Addressing Large Movements of Refugees and Migrants. She took up her current position in May 2017.

Today, she will give a lecture on disarmament of WMD in terms of both nuclear and non-nuclear weapons, as well as on ATT, Cyber and AI technologies, urging overall understanding towards security and disarmament while sharing her ideas about the expected, possible, and emerging roles of the United Nations.
